Subject: Microsoft settlement

I have watched the Microsoft anti-trust trial closely. Being a firm believer that Microsoft has mis-used its monopoly, I was very dismayed when the Justice Department settled the case so lamely. I do not think this is in the public interest. Already, Microsoft is trying to stretch its monopoly with Windows XP, .NET technologies, Web services etc. If you look at all these products, it is clear that Microsoft is intent on pursuing its dominating practices. There is much innovation that can happen in the Web services and other arenas ... but only if Microsoft is forced to allow it.

Yours sincerely
